Vetoes Bill to Repair Police Signal System

Mayor Wants Council to Delay Action Till After November Election; Miller Says Need for Funds Imperative.

Mayor William J. Locke today had vetoed an emergency ordinance calling for the repair of the city's police and fire signal system. The ordinance, passed at council's last meeting, set up $5,000 from the general fund for installing an underground cable for the signal system on West First street.

Locke returned the ordinance to council with a letter in which he asked that council defer action until after the November election. The mayor said that repairs should be included in the funds allocated from the proposed half-mill levy for modernizing the city's fire equipment.

FACES CHARGE

Registration Places Bigamy Count Against Man.

CHARDON — (AP) — Clarence Paul Morehead, 26, was charged with bigamy today as a result of his registration for the draft. He pleaded guilty and was held for the grand jury under $2,000 bond.

Morehead in 1939 married Miss Doris Buchner, then 16, with the permission of the girl's Russell township parents. A daughter was born to them May 1.

Mrs. Albert Alt Morehead of Upper Tract, W. Va., swore to the affidavit upon which the bigamy charge was based. She said she married Morehead there June 18, 1936. Prosecutor Harold K. Bostwick said the facts were unearthed in a draft board quiz.

Fred Miller, chairman of the finance committee, said today that the need for the repairs was critical and had been passed by council as an emergency measure.

"We have been trying to get funds for this work for more than two years," said Miller. "The system is obsolete and all locations will be made to modernize it. This, however, is a repair job, not a new project, and should be done immediately. Modernization of the system would take more than $25,000."

The mayor said that he also opposed the ordinance "because I do not want to see money taken from our unappropriated general fund." He suggested that the funds be used for storm sewers or street improvements instead.

At present, the city has approximately $20,000 at its disposal for street repairs. Since the beginning of the year, approximately $37,000 has been spent in street work. "There is plenty of money left (Continued on Page 3, Col. 5)

WPA Dims Chances for City Airport Improvement Program

WPA authorities threw cold water on plans for extensive improvement of Mansfield's municipal airport but officials announced that they would go ahead with a modified program.

D. E. Mahteny, WPA director of aeronautics, told association representatives and city officials meeting at the city hall that the city's share in a proposed improvement plan would be 64 per cent as they had expected. This would have raised the city's share from $50,000 to more than $125,000.

Mahteny said that his agency contributed 75 per cent on projects where laborers were used. The airport project was to employ machinery. Present WPA rolls drained by defense employment, would restrict the use of its laborers for the work.

James R. (Bud) Harrington, airport manager, said that the association would go ahead with a graduated improvement program. Harrington stated that plans for improvements would be drawn up and that a local citizens' committee with representatives from all city organizations would attempt to raise the city's share in financing them.

The plans would be presented to the WPA but would call for improvement of the airport only in stages. The first stage would be the construction of two hard runways, east and west. Other stages would include more runways and the purchase of additional land near the airport.

Roosevelt Challenges Red Sea Blockade

FREEDOM OF SEAS POLICY CITED BY FDR

SILENT ON APPEAL

Refuses To Elaborate on His Statement Yesterday To French People.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt injected today into a discussion of Germany's declaration that the Red sea will be a danger zone for foreign ships a pointed reminder that twice before in history the United States had used her warships to protect her commerce and obtain freedom of the seas.

He mentioned the action of the the barby pirates in the Mediterranean American republic against commerce a century ago and naval action as well against privateers in the Caribbean.

But when reporters inquired at a press conference whether he thought there were "any modern counterparts of the barby pirates," he told them merely to use their heads.

Freedom of the seas, he said, was an historic American policy but he did not indicate just what the United States might be prepared to do about the Red sea.

The president, in citing cases in history, said he was merely providing a lead for newsmen to follow up.

The Red sea once was closed to American shipping by designation of waters at its mouth as a combat area. Mr. Roosevelt recently removed the ban and American merchantmen are free, as far as their own government is concerned, to go up to the mouth of the Suez canal.

Germany subsequently declared the waters forming the approach to the canal to be in the war zone. The president said that international conditions were too serious for him to interpret or comment further on the implications of his appeal last night to the French people to turn down collaboration with Germany.

NEW ADJUTANT

Col. Bird Returns To Ohio To Head State Forces.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Col. Whitier S. Bird, released from active duty at Camp Shelby, Miss., as chief of staff of the 37th Division, Ohio National guard, returns to Columbus, May 22 to become adjutant general of Ohio.

Gov. John W. Bricker formally appointed Bird today after receiving from the war department confirmation of Bird's release. Bird will succeed the late Gilson D. Light, of Toledo.

A large-scale job awaits Colonel Bird. On April 28 the governor signed into law a bill creating an Ohio state guard to replace the national guard now in federal service. Together with a guard commander yet to be appointed, Bird will have the task of working out the details of the guard's personnel and physical make-up.

700 Workers Set to Return to Jobs at Lorain.

LORAIN — (AP) — Approximately 700 workers at the Thew Shovel company were to report back to work today after they voted to accept a compromise offer by the company for wage increases.

The nine-day walkout ended with a 5 to 1 vote in favor of a compromise of a sliding wage scale increase of from four to 14 cents an hour, instead of the flat 10 cents an hour demanded by the steel workers organizing committee.

STORM CAUSES DAMAGE HERE

Trees Uprooted, Power Lines Damaged By Severe Wind, Electrical Storm.

A brief but severe wind and electrical storm which swept across Richland county about 2:30 a. m. today blew down trees and caused minor damage to power lines.

Coming from the northwest following a sharp rise in temperature, the storm brought slightly more than a fifth of an inch of rain, enough to moisten newly planted crops which are suffering from lack of rainfall.

A tree which blew down at West Fourth street and West Park drive partly blocked traffic, while trees and large branches were reported down in rural sections of the county.

R. D. Iden, distribution superintendent of the Ohio Public Service company, said about a half dozen homes in the Mt. Zion church community southeast of Mansfield were without lights and power most of the night after a tree (Continued on Page 3, Col. 4)

FINDLAY — (UP) — Mary Mitchell, 22, third grade school teacher at Rawson, was credited today with saving a mother and her eight-year-old daughter from drowning at a school picnic.

Although she is not an expert swimmer, Miss Mitchell dove into Tawa creek yesterday and pulled out Mrs. John Walter and her daughter, Joan, 8. The young girl had fallen eight feet from a diving board into the water. Mrs. Walter ran to her aid and fell in herself when she fainted.

Petting Parties In Cemetery Bring Warning From Sheriff

Young couples in the Mansfield area will have to find some place other than the Memorial Park cemetery, west of the city, to do their petting, Sheriff Frank E. Robinson said today.

Acting on the complaint of Fred E. Rosin, manager of Memorial park, who said the cemetery has become a haven for petters, the sheriff said he would instruct his deputies to arrest any persons found in the cemetery after dark and charge them with trespassing.

Rosin told the sheriff that persons with relatives buried in the cemetery had complained of the couples' disregard for graves and monuments in the burial ground.

CANTON — (AP) — Robert Efinger, 51-year-old cafe operator, was shot to death in a daring daylight hold-up today when he resisted two robbers who escaped with $13,700 in cash.

Efinger had just drawn the money from a bank to cash factory payroll checks. He was ambushed as he emerged from his garage with the money in a satchel.

As he pulled his pistol to resist the hold-up men, one fired a shot into his stomach. Efinger fired one shot as he was falling, but it was wild. He died less than an hour later.

The robbers ran to a car in an adjoining lot and escaped. Police said a third man drove the car.

Lukens Says He's Not Guilty In Akron Cremation.

AKRON — (AP) — Pleading not guilty today to a charge that he cremated Ruth Zwicker, 24-year-old music student, in the furnace of North Hills Methodist church last Easter Sunday morning, Albert B. Lukens, 58, was returned to jail by Common Pleas Judge Walter B. Wanamaker.

Lukens asked the judge for a few days to engage the services of an attorney and Wanamaker granted the request and did not set a trial date.

A former janitor of the church where the Zwicker girl was killed, Lukens has confessed, according to Detective Inspector Verne Cross, that he shoved Miss Zwicker's body in the furnace after she fell against a piano bench while resisting his attempts to kiss her.

STRIKE AVERTED AT G. M. PLANT

Company Agrees to Pay Hike Under Term Set By Mediation Board.

(By Associated Press)

A threatened strike against the General Motors Corporation, holders of $750,000,000 in defense contracts, was averted early today when the company accepted a national mediation board peace formula a few hours before the scheduled deadline for the walkout.

The mediation board tentatively scratched another labor dispute off its books with word of union acceptance of terms to settle a strike at the Ex-Cell-O corporation, Detroit Die and Tool plant.

The General Motors settlement provided a flat wage increase of 10 cents an hour for an estimated 250,000 workers in 89 plants, and for no closed shop, union shop or maintenance-of-membership shop. Under a new contract to run one year from April 28, 1941, the company agreed not to lock out its employees, and to give consideration (Continued on Page 3, Col. 6)

Place Downtown Phones In Dial Operation Today

Many downtown telephone customers today were experiencing their first contact with dial operation as Mansfield Telephone company workers converted hundreds of business and private phones from semi-automatic to full dial service.

C. L. Lisle, maintenance superintendent, announced that more than 1,000 phones had already been cut over this week, bringing the total to date to 9,500. About 4,500 remain to be converted. Lisle said that additional lines would probably be cut over this week-end and that the conversion would be completed within the next two weeks.

Cut over this week were the Mifflin and north offices and the 4300, 4400, 4500 and 4600 series. The 4000 series were cut over last night. Lisle said that most of the phones affected are scattered through the downtown area.

Most of the business houses with private switchboards were given at least one dial-operating line, leaving them with the remainder on semi-automatic. Lisle said that 400 to 600 more phones will probably be changed over the week-end.

The maintenance superintendent said that little trouble was being experienced in the conversion. He announced that subscribers will no longer be informed when their phones will be cut over and should begin using dial operation immediately upon hearing a dial tone.

German tanks and bombers escorted by French fighting planes were reported moving across French-mandated Syria toward the ancient "Garden of Eden" kingdom of Iraq today as France's role in the war stirred grave repercussions in both London and Washington.

British middle east headquarters announced that RAF warplanes attacked the German aerial invaders yesterday in a series of raids in Syria, including Damascus, Rayak and Palmyra, where some of the principal airports are situated.

Nazi troop transports as well as giant bombers were said to have arrived in the French-ruled colony.

BREAK: U. S. In Open Split With Vichy on Collaboration

LONDON — (AP) — British officials today openly predicted that all French African colonies under Vichy control will be surrendered to Germany for war purposes. German use of the French fleet also was envisaged.

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON — The United States, except for the diplomatic formalities, reached an open break today with the Vichy government of France.

The administration, informed sources said, is satisfied that the program of increasing partnership with Germany and henceforth must be considered in about the same category as the governments of other Nazi-dominated nations in Europe.

The situation immediately thrust to the fore the future status of French colonial possessions in the Western Hemisphere, particularly Martinique in the Caribbean and French Guiana on the northeast coast of South America. A high official singled out Martinique as one colony that was receiving special attention.

There was no inkling in government quarters as to just what action might be contemplated, but administration spokesmen have repeatedly made clear that any attempt by a puppet government to use new world colonies in the interests of another power would be considered a change of colonial sovereignty and hence a violation of the Monroe Doctrine.

The United States took Greenland under its protection as a precaution against this, following German occupation of Denmark.

UNRAVELING: British Making Analysis of Hess Statements

LONDON — The British intelligence service took a hand in the bizarre case of Rudolf Hess today as the government called for expert help in analyzing statements gleaned from Adolf Hitler's erstwhile deputy.

Possible new developments in the affair were foreshadowed, meanwhile, by an early morning conference between minister of Information Alfred Duff Cooper and the Duke of Hamilton, Scottish nobleman through whom, the Germans assert, Hess believed he could single-handedly arrange peace with Britain.

The duke, an RAF squadron leader, arrived in London after midnight at the controls of an army plane after talking with Hess for a second time in the secret retreat where the German is guarded as closely as any prisoner who ever entered the old tower of London.

It was reported last night that the nobleman was accompanied by Ivone Kirkpatrick, foreign office adviser and former British embassy secretary in Berlin who knew Hess before the war and who established his identification.

Others Get Certificates as Shelby High Holds Its Recognition Day.

SHELBY—Annual Recognition day program was held today at Shelby high school and for the first time in the history of the school, two boys, William Daugherty, 17, and Paul Haas, 18, earned the highest scholastic honors over the girl students.

During the program, they received recognition for having maintained an average ranking of "first quarter" in all of the subjects during the past four years of high school work which is the highest rating a student can receive.

Both students are members of the graduating class of this spring.

A third boy, John Purdy, 18, another senior class member, took the highest honorary award when he was selected by popular vote of the students and faculty as the student doing the most outstanding work for the school in outside activities.

The two scholastic students will have their names engraved on a plaque in the rear of the school auditorium. Purdy was presented a certificate bearing recognition of his selection as the outstanding student of 1940-41.

Recognized as the best citizens of the school were the following by the grades they represented: Senior class, Thomas Mayer; Mary McHugh, Junior class, James Herbert, Sophomore, Verna Van Wagner, freshman, Gordon Lewis, eighth grade, and Jack Easterday, seventh grade. COAL!

Will there be enough FOR YOU?

THE MOST IMPORTANT MATERIAL in our National Defense Program—is Coal!

To produce the planes, tanks, guns and munitions needed for defense, a CONTINUOUS SUPPLY OF COAL is absolutely necessary. Important in maintaining this continuous supply is the STORING of an adequate coal reserve by ALL consumers—home and industrial alike!

Coal consumption from May 1 to October 1 even before the peak of cold weather and national defense industry demands begin will be 206,500,000 tons

Under ORDINARY circumstances, an adequate reserve would have been built up at the mines, at retail coal dealers and at industrial plants. In fact, on April 1, 1941, these reserve stores totaled 50,650,000 tons

But the recent strike reduced stocks by May 1, 1941, to 13,500,000 tons

For safety, this storage in homes, at retail dealers and in industrial plants by Oct. 1, 1941, should total at least 50,000,000 tons

This means that by Oct. 1, 1941, there must be added to present stocks 36,500,000 tons

The problem, therefore, is to produce, transport and deliver by Oct. 1, 1941, the coal necessary to build up present reserves to 50,000,000 tons. PLUS the 206,500,000 tons which will be consumed by Oct. 1, a grand total of 243,000,000 tons

This is an average of more than 11,500,000 tons of coal each week!

During the period from Jan. 1 to April 1, 1941, the average weekly production totaled only 10,400,000 tons—about 1,100,000 tons per week less than is necessary to provide a minimum margin of safety for ensuring the necessary coal reserve for industrial and home use.

Because of the general acceptance of our DOMESTIC COALS for storing by retailers and householders, mines in our district must of necessity furnish a very high percentage of this type of coal.

The softer structure, higher sulphur coals are not generally acceptable for storing purposes. Therefore, mines producing such coals rarely operate at anything near capacity during the summer months.

From May to September, 1940, inclusive, the country's entire coal production was only 8,300,000 tons per week.

This year, in order to provide enough coal for only reasonable storage and meet actual consumers' demands, the coal industry should ship—and consumers accept—3,200,000 tons more each week from May through September.

This is probably the limit of the capacity of the mines and the railroads.

There are other factors which will tend to delay the building up of adequate coal reserves for the coming fall and winter months when cold weather will add its burden of increased consumption of domestic coals. These factors are: the use of coal cars by other national defense industries; the congestion of cars at the seaboard and lake ports; the loss of employees at the mines because of the draft and the increased need for skilled labor by other defense industries.

As defense production, now only 50% under way, reaches its peak, the supply of coal will not satisfy the demand and the situation will indeed be serious for those who have not anticipated their needs.

• In YOUR OWN INTEREST, as well as in the INTEREST OF NATIONAL DEFENSE, it is imperative that as much coal as possible be speedily placed in storage in homes and in industrial plants—while operating and transportation conditions are most favorable.

In plain words, if all who will need coal this winter begin to store theirs now, as quickly as it is mined and shipped, there will be coal for all. If everyone waits until September and October to order coal, there will be such a piling up of orders that shipments and deliveries cannot be made at all. This should not be allowed to happen. IT WILL NOT HAPPEN IF YOU GET YOUR COAL NOW!

NAZIS MOVE INTO SYRIA; SALUM FALLS

German Tanks and Bombers Heading for Iraq; Defeat in Africa Admitted.

Trans-Jordan forces along the Iraq frontier.

Trans-Jordan, which borders on Iraq and Palestine, is guarded by strong British forces under Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson.

The Baghdad government declared that "swift and severe measures" would be taken if the frontier incidents were not halted.

Iraq newspapers flared with headlines reporting that Soviet Russia was "disposed" to lend help and that Russian volunteers were joining the Iraq air force to help fight against Britain.

On the North African war front, the German high command acknowledged that British tanks had stormed back into the key frontier post of Salum, just inside Egypt, which has been the scene of fierce fighting for weeks.

A Nazi communique also noted that strong British forces advanced on Fort Capuzzo, across the border in Libya.

This would indicate a serious setback to the Axis drive toward the Suez canal, which only a few days ago had knifed 45 miles into Egypt.

A British headquarters communique from Cairo said serious casualties had been inflicted by the British on Axis forces which had held the Egyptian border outpost, just across from the Libyan frontier, and some German prisoners had been made.

Besides recapturing Salum, the British said Halfaya Pass—whose hot, embattled sands British soldiers call "Hellfire Pass"—and Mitala also were retaken.

The German high command acknowledged that British forces had "penetrated" Salum, but said this was only part of stronger forces which advanced both on that post and Fort Capuzzo in Libya.

The British paid heavily in casualties and prisoners, the Germans said. Halfaya Pass is a narrow passage just southeast of Salum, between the Mediterranean shore and an inland escarpment. Through it passes the road back to Sidi Barrani, 60 miles within Egypt, which was the high water mark of the Italian advance and the Fascists' strongest forward base.

Except for diplomatic formalities, informed quarters said, the United States has reached an open break with the French government of Chief of State Philippe Petain, 85-year-old hero of Verdun.

In London, the British government was reported to have solemnly warned France against further collaboration with Germany, especially in view of developments in the middle east.

Reuters, British news agency, quoted a dispatch from Cairo that German occupation of Syria had begun, with Nazi tanks, war materials and planes crossing the French-mandated nation in the direction of Iraq—apparently in response to an appeal by Iraq's Premier Rashid Ali Al Gailani, who seized power early in April in a coup d'etat.

Twenty big long-range Nazi bombers were reported to have landed at Damascus, and an unspecified number of transport planes at Rayak airdrome, 30 miles from Beirut.

Other German planes—bearing advance parties of propagandists and "specialists"—were reported to have landed in Iraq yesterday; and it appeared evident that Adolf Hitler was drawing his battle lines for a major campaign in Asia Minor.

Authorized quarters in London professed confidence that the Iraq situation "can and will be handled all right," but the British government was known to be deeply concerned over France's attitude, and the London Daily Express said bluntly:

"The painful possibility of direct conflict between Britain and Vichy must be faced."

The London radio said the British press agreed generally that "a new and critical phase has been reached in British relations with the men of Vichy."

Only yesterday, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the house of commons that RAF warplanes had been "authorized" to bomb Nazi planes in Syria, and unconfirmed reports said the RAF had already attacked one base in the French mandate, which lies next door to Iraq.

Members of parliament were described as feeling that Eden's statement "was in effect a declaration of war on the Vichy government," according to the London News-Chronicle.

In the war in the air, the British sent some of the RAF's biggest bombers against Berlin—the Germans admitted a "number" of explosive fire-bombs fell on the outskirts of the Reich capital—and also attacked Hannover, Hamburg, Cuxhaven and Nazi invasion ports along the French coast.

Heavy explosions rumbling across the channel coast for several hours before dawn indicated that RAF bombers were hammering at Boulogne, Calais and German bases further inland.

Once again, Hitler's Luftwaffe remained strangely inactive, peppering the British Isles with only small, widely-separated attacks.

Coupled with the successful counter-attack in North Africa, Premier Mussolini's high command admitted that British forces were striking hard at the Italian stronghold of Amba Alaji, in northern Ethiopia.

The British have reported 38,000 Italians trapped in the post.

Two developments, coming in swift succession last night, were interpreted by observers as indicating Washington's sudden withdrawal of confidence in Vichy:

1—President Roosevelt, in an almost unprecedented step, appealed to the French people over the head of the Petain government, to reject any "so-called collaboration which will in reality imply their alliance with a military power whose central and fundamental policy calls for the utter destruction of freedom."

2—U. S. coast guardsmen were stationed aboard all French vessels in American ports, including the liner Normandie, presumably to protect them against sabotage such as had crippled most of the recently-seized Axis vessels.

Well-informed authorities in Washington said the president's appeal could be interpreted as meaning that Washington no longer placed reliance in the ability of Marshal Petain to resist German pressure for more active co-operation and that France henceforth must be considered in about the same category as other Nazi-dominated countries.

U. S. IN BREAK WITH FRANCE

Relations Split After Vichy Announcement on Nazi Collaboration Plan.

an appeal to the French people over the head of the Vichy government.

He called on them, in effect, to reject even yet any "so-called collaboration" which will in reality imply their alliance with a military power whose central and fundamental policy calls for the utter destruction of freedom."

The people of the United States, he declared, could hardly believe that the Vichy government would enter an alliance "which would apparently deliver up France and its colonial empire, including French African colonies and their Atlantic coasts with the menace which involves to the peace and safety of the Western Hemisphere."

The unexpected pronouncement from the White House followed swiftly on the heels of the radio address of Marshal Henri Petain to the French people, saying that "collaboration" negotiations had "lighted the pathway to the future" for France.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement, well informed authorities said, could be interpreted as meaning that this government no longer placed reliance in the ability of the aged world war marshal to resist German pressure for progressively more active cooperation with the Nazi program.

This "collaboration," it was believed, probably would entail Vichy's abandonment of neutrality and then a gradual gravitation to the status of a belligerent against Britain, France's erstwhile ally.

Before President Roosevelt spoke out, the government manifested its abrupt withdrawal of confidence in Vichy by ordering armed coast guardsmen aboard all French vessels, including the luxury liner Normandie, once the pride of France's merchant fleet.

The reason for this action was not explained. Coast guard officers said merely "you can draw your own conclusions," but other sources asserted that it was undoubtedly to protect the ships—numbering a dozen or more—from possible sabotage, such as had crippled most of the recently-seized Axis vessels.

One aspect of Mr. Roosevelt's statement that aroused particular interest was his implication that Vichy was about to conclude an alliance with Germany. This led to the belief in diplomatic quarters that the chief executive based his remarks on information direct from Admiral William D. Leahy, ambassador at Vichy, because the generalities of Marshal Petain's address were not considered sufficient for such a conclusion.

Informed quarters said that they thought that Mr. Roosevelt's appeal was aimed primarily, not at unoccupied France, but rather at those parts of the French empire which still remain loyal to the Petain regime.

an appeal to the French people over the head of the Vichy government.

He called on them, in effect, to reject even yet any "so-called collaboration" which will in reality imply their alliance with a military power whose central and fundamental policy calls for the utter destruction of freedom."

The people of the United States, he declared, could hardly believe that the Vichy government would enter an alliance "which would apparently deliver up France and its colonial empire, including French African colonies and their Atlantic coasts with the menace which involves to the peace and safety of the Western Hemisphere."

The unexpected pronouncement from the White House followed swiftly on the heels of the radio address of Marshal Henri Petain to the French people, saying that "collaboration" negotiations had "lighted the pathway to the future" for France.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement, well informed authorities said, could be interpreted as meaning that this government no longer placed reliance in the ability of the aged world war marshal to resist German pressure for progressively more active cooperation with the Nazi program.

This "collaboration," it was believed, probably would entail Vichy's abandonment of neutrality and then a gradual gravitation to the status of a belligerent against Britain, France's erstwhile ally.

Before President Roosevelt spoke out, the government manifested its abrupt withdrawal of confidence in Vichy by ordering armed coast guardsmen aboard all French vessels, including the luxury liner Normandie, once the pride of France's merchant fleet.

The reason for this action was not explained. Coast guard officers said merely "you can draw your own conclusions," but other sources asserted that it was undoubtedly to protect the ships—numbering a dozen or more—from possible sabotage, such as had crippled most of the recently-seized Axis vessels.

One aspect of Mr. Roosevelt's statement that aroused particular interest was his implication that Vichy was about to conclude an alliance with Germany. This led to the belief in diplomatic quarters that the chief executive based his remarks on information direct from Admiral William D. Leahy, ambassador at Vichy, because the generalities of Marshal Petain's address were not considered sufficient for such a conclusion.

Informed quarters said that they thought that Mr. Roosevelt's appeal was aimed primarily, not at unoccupied France, but rather at those parts of the French empire which still remain loyal to the Petain regime.

tion to seniority in making promotions.

The corporation estimated the wage increases would add $50,000,000 annually to its payroll. The present wage before the raise, the management said, was about $1 an hour.

The CIO United Automobile workers originally had called a strike against 60 of the General Motors plants for 7 a. m. Thursday, but the union postponed the deadline for 24 hours at the mediation board's request. Nevertheless, more than 35,000 GM employees walked out of plants at Flint and Saginaw, Mich., yesterday—a result, the union said, of a misunderstanding about the postponement.

Walter P. Reuther, director of the GM division of UAW, called the agreement "the greatest victory" for General Motors workers since the first contract was signed in 1937, and said the wage increase was the largest ever won in the automobile industry.

Although employees of the Cell-O corporation at Detroit voted to accept terms to end their 10-day strike, the management had not agreed to the mediation board's suggestion and time of reopening the plant thus was uncertain. Terms of the proposal were not disclosed.

Detroit, however, was experiencing other labor disputes. Some 8,500 CIO-UAW members struck against the Hudson Motor company, asking 15 cents an hour increase over unrevealed current wage scales. Ten thousand AFL craftsmen in Detroit went out on a sympathy strike last Friday in support of 1,500 lumber truckers who seek union recognition, a 51-2 day week and wage increases.

Today's quiz: What is the first name of the vice president—or even his last one?

As defined by Robert Quillen, "Character is what you have left when your reputation is gone."

Frances Perkins is included in a list of American women credited with notable achievements—and it is understood she did right well before becoming secretary of labor.

In the Right Direction

IN THE RUSH of legislation passed by the Ohio assembly in its closing sessions, a measure changing regulations on the issuance of driving licenses has been almost completely overlooked.

In its original form a toothless measure, whose outstanding feature was that it raised revenue, the licensing legislation now begins to approach the goal it should have been aimed at in the beginning, although it has not yet gone all the distance.

It sets 18 as a minimum age for issuing driving licenses, except in unusual cases, where the right to operate a motor car is granted only under restrictions, and it sets up requirements for financial responsibility of minors to whom licenses are issued.

It further provides that licenses of motorists who fail to appear in court after posting bond on traffic violation charges may be suspended.

This paper has long argued that a drivers' license law, to be effective, should be implemented by sufficient penalties for infractions of traffic laws, and should stipulate a reasonable ability to operate a motor vehicle. This latter need becomes more important as more cars are operated on streets and highways.

In its amended form, the law still falls short, but it is a step in the right direction.

Introduced in the senate by Senator Fred Seibert in the upper house, the bill was sponsored in the lower house by Richland county Representative John L. Catlett.

Civilization Depends On People

A PLEASANT shock of surprise results from finding an educator calmly announcing that our young people are lucky to be living today. They're lucky to be living, of course—but today doesn't look so good as it might, to a lot of them.

"You are a favored group," says Dean William R. Westhafer of the Ohio Academy of Science. "You are fortunate to live in a time when the battle against superstition has been won, and you are fortunate to live in a country where men are free to seek truth through the study of science." As for the wrong uses made of science, he says "one might as well argue against the force of gravitation because it may be used to destroy life as well as to preserve it."

The learned doctor has a case, no doubt. It isn't fair to blame science—which is organized knowledge of the forces of nature—for being used to kill people.

But observing how our scientific knowledge is perverted in these days to destroy the civilization it has created, some naturally wonder whether our educational system isn't paying too much attention to material science and too little to human beings.

People, not machines, are the main thing. Our machines are not making us wise, good and happy. Quite the contrary. Destructive machinery is not civilization. Civilization is good men and women living happily together and doing fine things for each other instead of killing each other.

Taxes are Payments for Service

THOUGH it is an inalienable right of citizens in free countries to grumble about taxes, it isn't wise of them to try to block all tax legislation. When almost every tax proposed runs up against the criticism that "it will be difficult to enforce, relatively unproductive and unnecessarily vexatious," thoughtful citizens begin to wonder whether grumbling isn't being carried too far.

Most people expect to pay for everything they get for themselves. They expect to pay for services they engage as private citizens. In clubs and organizations they expect to pay dues and special assessments to maintain buildings and provide entertainment.

In the biggest organization to which they belong, the government of the United States of America, they must also expect to pay for goods and services. It is right to insist that they get honest and competent service for their money. It is unfair to try to dodge taxes themselves and seek to have them all imposed on the other fellows.

Baseball Returns To Mansfield

MANSFIELD'S baseball season opened officially last night as the Braves and Lima Pandas lifted the Ohio State league lid at the Fairground.

There arises once more that perennial question: Is a baseball team a civic project. And the answer seems to be: More or less. More if the team is winning, and less if it isn't. In the final analysis it comes down to this: The ball club has one thing to sell to the public of Mansfield—baseball. If the quality of the product the club has to sell is of high standard, there should be no difficulty in finding buyers for the tickets the club will place at the gate.

From the enthusiastic reports on the sport pages, we'd judge that the Mansfield ball club has a good product to sell the fans this season.

All-Purpose Tree Planting

REFORESTATION, says an authority, is not an expenditure. It is one of the soundest investments a state can make. Most states have begun to see it in that light and are carrying on forestry projects, with the co-operation of the federal government.

There are states so aware of the advantages of extensive tree planting that they do not limit it to forest areas. Wisconsin, in addition to developing forests, is planting trees in parks, along highways, at wayside shelters, in farm woodlots, along streams to prevent erosion, and in extensive shelter belts.

Such a program benefits agriculture, fishing and hunting, water supply, industry and recreation.

"Assume that your congressman has ordinary intelligence" is a bit of advice to letter-writing constituents. That's a tough assignment for the constituents who didn't vote for him.

CONFUSION IN PARADISE

Protest at 'Draft Women' Proposal

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

THE AMERICAN male sex is in great good luck that it was a woman (Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt), not a man, who suggested conscription of girls for auxiliary duty with our military trainees in connection with our national defense program.

Our women's reaction to the proposal hasn't been a bit favorable, as indicated by bushel baskets of mail received by senators, representatives and assorted government officials since the first lady put it forward.

Not that the girls are unwilling to do their full part, toward preparing the country to defend itself. If invited to enroll as nurses, home economists, farm managers, and for such mechanical activities as their sex is adapted to practically all their letters say they can be counted on to volunteer by the million. What they violently object to is the idea of conscription.

Many of their communications assert that, on an average, women are more patriotic than men are. Boys, they say, HAVE to be drafted or the army wouldn't get enough of them, but girls simply WANT to do their share—only, be darned if they'll stand for being requisitioned forcibly.

The group first heard from in Washington naturally was close at hand, right in the capital, and their comment proves to have been fairly representative of the flood of correspondence that's followed.

A Few Samples.

For instance: President Sadie Dunbar of the General Federation of Women's Clubs: "I see no reason why a woman shouldn't volunteer, but I don't believe in putting it on a draft basis."

Director Mabel Cook of the Girl

Reserves, Y. W. C. A.: "It would seem to be unnecessary, to draft."

Miss Anninett Gordon, prominent social deb: "I think a lot of parents would hit the ceiling."

President C. D. Lowe of the District of Columbia of Parents and Teachers: "I'm not in favor of any kind of compulsory training for women."

Associate Editress Marian Mattee of the American Eagle, American University publication: "Women should help, but I don't think it should be compulsory."

Miss Elizabeth Funk, Maryland university sorority leader: "I stand entirely on voluntary service for women."

Miss Doris Conklin, Pan-Hellenic delegate at George Washington university: "Women always have taken their part in humanitarian duties and there's no need for drafting them."

Religious Education Director Annabelle Spangler of Hamline Methodist church: "I oppose Mrs. Roosevelt's suggestion for compulsory training for young women."

Listen World!

Getting Acquainted

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THEY'RE going to be married next month. And they wish I'd tell them what is "the most important rule to observe in making a happy marriage."

No dice, youngsters. I can't know what's best for you—and mighty seldom for myself! But I can give you one tip that applies to every human relationship and particularly to marriage:

IF YOU WANT TO STAY IN LOVE—

IF YOU WANT TO REMAIN INTERESTING TO EACH OTHER—

AND KEEP YOUR MARRIAGE AN EXCITING ADVENTURE—

DON'T TRY TO GET TOO WELL ACQUAINTED!

Human beings are individuals before they fall in love, and if they value their mutual happiness they'll preserve that individuality afterward.

Remember the thrill of wandering down some newly discovered wood trail, delighting in its unexpected turns, its tantalizing vistas? Human spirits are like wood trails with much the same allure.

We, too, have our hidden patterns of light and shade, our surprising twists, our mysterious caves of escape. This is, at once, our charm and the source of our strength. If it is destroyed, we, ourselves, are destroyed.

You wouldn't enjoy a forest path much if someone stripped it of its undergrowth, drained its glimmering pools, clipped its trees, to one, monotonous level. Yet how often, in the name of "love," we invade another life, expose its deepest privacy, its hidden sanctuary, demanding that it surrender every secret.

Then what? Then we wonder why we go stale on each other, why we are no longer eager, excited, allured.

To be One's Self—within civilized limitations—is our most sacred privilege and responsibility. It is the source of our peculiar power, our ambition and self-confidence. And no one, however near or dear, has the right to block that privilege.

IF YOU WANT TO STAY TOGETHER, STAY APART!

Stay far enough away to keep the charm and mystery that first attracted you. Respect the Other Fellow's privacy and peculiarities.

Let him grow in his own design. LIFE WILL KNOCK HIS EARS DOWN SOON ENOUGH. DON'T USE YOUR WEDDING RING AS IF IT WERE A PAIR OF BRASS KNUCKLES.

More marriages have been wrecked by unwise intimacy and stupid possessiveness than were ever ruined by any other cause.

A man once said to me, "I love Elizabeth. But if I ever divorce her—which God forbid—it will be because she always reminds me to wear my rubbers and insists on my eating prunes."

Silly? No. Profound truth. You can wreck love as surely with pin pricks or pouts as with depth bombs. Hands off, if you want romance to last. Give 'em air!

Capital Diplomats Doubt Hess Can Tell Nazi Military Secrets

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON.—According to best diplomatic advice available here, it seems probable that Rudolf Hess will be able to give the British almost no Nazi military secrets. Inside explanation of his weird airplane flight to Scotland is that Hess had repeatedly warned Hitler against a policy of trying to conquer the whole world. This caused a break between him and der fuhrer, and Hess had been under suspicion for some time.

Hitler assigned eight or nine Gestapo men to watch him constantly. These were the "adjutants" or "aides" described as arrested in Berlin dispatches. Apparently Hitler made the mistake of telling the Gestapo merely that Hess was suffering from a mental breakdown, and did not tell them the real facts. That was why they let him go to an airplane factory where a friend lent him a Messerschmitt 110.

According to uncensored diplomatic dispatches, there has been a growing rift between the leaders who built up the Nazi political organization and the army leaders who built up the German military machines. The politicians staged the revolution and made a big army possible; but now the army is in the saddle and plans to stay there.

9,000,000 German Soldiers.

TODAY in Germany 9,000,000 men are under arms. These men see less and less of Hitler, more and more of their own officers. Their victories are not victories based on propaganda or politics but on efficient organization and a cold-blooded military machine. Propaganda and Nazi "helling" made the war possible, but the Junker leaders of Germany's age-old military caste have taken the country far beyond.

Into this new evolution of German leadership Hitler has fitted very, very comfortably. He was the first to see Germany's need of a big army, and he is 100 per cent with the army today. If he wasn't, it probably would not matter to the new army leaders, but that exigency hasn't arisen as yet.

Goering, born of the Junker caste and trained to be an officer, also fits neatly into the shifted picture. But Rudolf Hess did not. He and some of the other political leaders did not envisage a war to conquer the world, but only domination of the continent and semi-partnership with England regarding other parts of the globe. They have had doubts about internal political sentiment if the German people were pushed too far. Germany has undergone enough hardships since 1914, they argued, and there is no need to conquer the world.

No Military Secrets.

HOW DEEP this rift extends is not known, but diplomatic dispatches indicate it has been deepening and that Hess, under suspicion in recent months, has not been in the confidence of the Nazi high command. Hence he may not be of much military use to the British.

A super-sensitive person, Hess frequently had shown signs of worry about the fate of Germany and the Nazi party. Last fall diplomatic dispatches reported that he was confined to his home because he kept giving Hitler pessimistic warnings of what was in store for Germany.

For a time members of the diplomatic corps in Berlin did not know what had become of the No. 3 Nazi, though he had either been purged or killed at the front. Later he returned to official life and appeared close to Hitler until recently, when the Balkan-Near Eastern campaign was launched.

A Farmer's Diary

Woods After a Fire

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

A MONTH AGO, on the morning after the grass fire got out of bounds and burned its way across our woodland the hilltop woods was a desolate place. We walked across it, my wife and I, and were appalled.

Dry ashes, ankle deep in places, covered the ground and sifted into our shoes. Charred logs and stumps were everywhere. The place smelled of hot, scorched ruin. Wild grapes vines lay like twisted, lifeless snakes that had withered and died. An occasional hollow log or tree still smoldered.

Higher than our heads the stems of trees were bare and blasted. The floor was clean of undergrowth and brambles. At one place where the fire had swept two ways around a snag and left a greenish island, two rabbits went in and out of their brushpile home—the only one that did not burn.

A little later we saw a strong wind send gray ashes flying in a cloud. We heard the rain and felt its welcome touch upon the blasted woods. Gradually, from below, the slope began to take on a hint of green. At first only a single crooked spear of grass would show to every square foot. Very gradually the hillside became a tender green—very clean and pretty by contrast with its former unkempt appearance.

We waited long before entering the woods again. Then, half fearfully we reconnoitered. May apples greeted us first, very luxuriant and vivid against the blackened bases of the trees. A cluster of sponge mushrooms dared to show. We gathered them, avidly and looked about for more. Farther in, beneath the higher trees, tops leading out, an area grew thick with trilliums. We were surprised, delighted.

Low thick briars and shrubs were gone or left quite dead. Sun and light can enter better now. The biggest hardwood trees are very little hurt.

"But what a shame to lose a tree like this," I said to my companion, pointing to a slender beech three inches through, that had its bark burned quite off near the ground.

"You can plant oak or pine or walnut seedlings and they will have room to grow," she said. "A mixed forest would be nice."

Perhaps she's right. At any rate we are glad it was no worse, and that most of the damage was on our own acreage.

CHAPTER XX

She prayed fervently as she ran into the living room and quickly dialed a number on the telephone. If only she were on the right track! She had to be, that's all! Ruthie answered the call. "Nearly incoherent in her excitement, Raye said, 'Ruthie—is Hal there? This is Raye.' 'Ye-s.' Ruthie sounded disagreeably surprised. 'I thought I recognized your voice.' 'Please let me talk to Hal!' Ruthie appeared to hesitate. She drawled hesitantly, 'I'll see if he's here.' 'Just as if she doesn't know!' thought Raye impatiently, her nerves dancing a fierce tattoo. As if Ruthie's precious Hal was about to be snatched by a siren! If only Ruthie wouldn't be so narrow-minded—if only she would hurry!

"Good evening, Raye." Hal's voice was carefully controlled. Raye had seen the time when all this caution for Ruthie's benefit would have amused, perhaps even baffled her. Now she totally ignored it.

She blurted out, "Something dreadful has happened, Hal! I thought you'd like to know about it. Bill Anderson is detained for the shooting—and we must get him out!"

"Get him out of what? For heaven's sake, Raye, calm down—give me the story in plain English."

He sounded all out of sorts. Her heart sank. Probably, she wouldn't be able to do a thing with him.

Raye swallowed and squared her shoulders. She gripped the telephone receiver tighter in her two hands.

She explained to Hal Bedford clearly, "Bill Anderson's in jail. He's being kept there because he can't raise bail, or give bond. They think he's the one who shot you. You know how ridiculous that is, Hal. You know perfectly well he didn't."

"Of course not—no!" exploded Hal.

Raye sighed with relief. She had rather thought she could count on Hal's fairness. If he knew who had tried to kill him, he knew it was not Bill Anderson.

Hal added slowly, as if choosing his words, "This is, I can't believe it was Anderson. He had no reason—he's not that sort."

"Will you—will you furnish bail for him, Hal?" "Why, sure! It's tough—his being held for such a thing."

"Yes, isn't it?" Raye sounded quite rational now. She was even smiling a little.

Then she looked worried. She hoped Hal wouldn't discover that Bill Anderson had confessed to the shooting!

"A man trying to make his own way in the world," she hastened to add. "I knew you'd help him." "Absolutely. I'll go right down and fix things up. If they won't allow me, the injured party, to go his bond, I'll arrange it some other way."

Raye somehow gathered the impression that Hal was greatly upset. It flashed through her mind that he might feel responsible, if he knew police were holding an innocent suspect. In fact, just this had flashed through her mind before she called him. She had—thank goodness—been on the right track.

"You're simply grand, Hal!" she sang into the mouthpiece now, then frowned and quickly hung up. She hoped the concealed Hal wouldn't take her praise too literally.

She tried to feel a little easier about Bill after this, but she was as nervous as a mother bird protecting her young.

She attempted to tell herself that this was foolishness. But her heart answered for her. She loved Bill—she had to protect him at every turn, didn't she?

She began pacing up and down her tiny apartment. Then she abruptly stopped and dropped into a chair with a book.

She opened the book and tried to focus her tired eyes on the page; but the type blurred and her brain refused to function. Impatiently, she threw the book down on an end table.

She went to lie full length on the davenport and closed her aching, twitching eyes, trying not to think. She dared not face facts. She refused to face any that were detrimental to Bill Anderson. Other people, judges and lawyers, she worried, would call this evading the issue. They would piece two and two together, get the jigsaw puzzle into proper form and place the guilt where it belonged. When a man confessed, what more was there to it?

Oh, it mustn't be! She couldn't—she wouldn't have it so! Hal Bedford, Bill and herself—those stern-faced men would make an ugly case out of it before they were through! And why couldn't Hal's father, Stevens Bedford, let well enough alone? Why did he insist upon getting at the bottom of this sordid affair? Perhaps he thought it wise to learn more about his wild son's recent activities. Even so, this bringing innocent people—well, anyway, she would never concede Bill's guilt.

She must have slept, because when she opened her eyes again the room was quite dark.

She sat up in alarm. This late—and no word from either Hal—or Bill!

She jumped to her feet, stumbled across the room and switched on the reading lamp.

She glanced apprehensively at her wrist watch. Ten o'clock! What could have happened?

The telephone bell sent her heart to her throat. She had the instrument in her hand in a flash.

Just as she had hoped. It was Bill.

"Darling—I'm out—thanks to Hal Bedford."

"Oh, Bill—I'm so—so glad."

"Yes—it certainly was decent of Bedford. Not many men in similar circumstances would have been so white—after hearing my story."

"Oh, so—so you acknowledged."

"Yes—why not?"

COUNTY RELIEF SHOWS DECLINE FOR 3RD MONTH

Finney Reports April Costs Drop $1,848 With 89 Fewer Cases During Period.

For the third successive month, relief expenditures for the Mansfield and Richland county area in April showed substantial decreases, according to the monthly report of J. V. Finney, relief director.

Finney reported today that relief costs for April were only $9,190.23, a drop of $1,848.06 in the month. The case load dropped 89 cases making a total of 391 including 1,215 persons. Finney said that the decrease in cost and cases was due to the spurt in private industry owing to defense work.

April by far showed the greatest drop for the year so far. Decreases in February included the dropping of 16 cases and $428.71 in expenses and in March of 18 cases and $693.03 in expense. The number of persons receiving relief aid was reduced from 1,568 in January to 1,215 at the beginning of May, Finney reported.

Only 153 cases or 536 persons were given direct and work relief as 25 new cases were added and 48 closed. In March, only 31 had been closed. Medical services for indigent persons however rose from $489.40 to $965.18.

Certificates to WPA work were almost halved when only 38 persons were certified as compared to 71 in March. Employees on WPA projects throughout the county declined from 453 to 406. Only 90 are awaiting assignments.

In Mansfield, relief cases dropped from 304 to 238 leaving only 679 persons being aided, a decrease of 184 in the month. Costs were only $3,343.95, representing a drop of $1,397.24.

Approximately 27 tons of surplus food commodities were distributed by the relief office. Starting next month, these commodities will be distributed under the food stamp plan.

Testifying in a divorce suit in Los Angeles court, Mrs. Lucille Rawleigh Smith, daughter of an Illinois millionaire, told how her husband, Quentin R. She claimed her husband smashed furniture and art objects and sent frightened servants scattering in confusion.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers) By ADELE GARRISON

I took Marion's letter to Ronald in my dress, with fingers that I had hard work to keep steady. Mary's evident excitement at my account of the letter, with its cryptic references to herself, must have infected me. I told myself scathingly.

At any rate when Mary fairly snatched the letter from me and began to read it feverishly, I was glad that her eyes were riveted on the written page instead of on me. I was conscious that my face was anything but a "poker" one, and I was trembling perceptibly.

"Oh! oh! the poor darling!" she exclaimed. "She's trying to tell me something I remember enough for that, only I can't make it out. She has remembered all these years! It must have meant more to her than I thought. And now—I can't remember."

Her voice trailed off despairingly, and I rose from my chair and put compelling hands upon her shoulders.

May Mean Life or Death.

"You must remember something about it, Mary," I said sternly. "What you can remember may mean life for Marion instead of death."

She made a little moaning sound, then lifted tortured eyes to mine. "Don't you think I know that from what you've just told me?" she asked. "And I am trying—going over every word I can. But it's like a picture puzzle with most of the pieces missing. I can't figure out a thing."

"Well, then suppose you stop raving," I told her calmly, seeing that in her present excitement I could get nothing from her. "Just lean back, relax and answer some questions I want to put to you."

"I hope I can give you the right answers," she said despondently.

"I sincerely echo that wish, Mary," I told her and then began my interrogation.

"Am I right in thinking this letter is written in some sort of code known only to you and Marion?" I asked.

"Yes, it is," she answered. "I

And now, I can't understand it myself. "How do you know it's a code, then?" I asked, casting about in my mind for some way of tapping the reservoir of Mary's memory, in which I was sure the key of the code was locked.

"Because of those misspelled words," she answered promptly. "They figure in it a lot, but just how, I've forgotten, except that some of them are signals for you to read just the opposite meaning in the sentences preceding them. But I've forgotten which words were intended to be used that way. But oh! Auntie Madge, don't you see something in that?"

She sprang up and clasped my shoulders convulsively.

Begins to See Light.

"This must mean this letter to Ronald is all a lie—that about her not loving him any longer and intending to marry somebody else. Did you say Ronald believed that of Marion?"

"At first, yes," I answered reluctantly. "But I'm sure he has changed his mind now."

"That's your work," Mary commented, but I interrupted her summarily.

"All that can wait," I said. "Tell me, now, everything you remember about that code, and the way you came to invent it."

"I'm afraid I invented it primarily to keep Marion from tagging me around," she said.

I nodded, for I well remembered the time when the Harrison children first visited the farmhouse, and impulsive Mary's reaction to the wide-eyed adulation which Marion, younger than she, gave to her. There had been impudence in that reaction, an impudence, however, which, to do her credit, had never been exhibited to the younger girl, although both Lillian and I saw it clearly.

"I can imagine how enthusiastic Marion must have been about a code," I said.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

Shepard Barclay "The Authority on Asnerities"

A GOOD SCOTCH IDEA

Never refuse to take a trick when able to, unless you have a definite reason for letting your opponent have it. This applies especially to the use of the ace in the dummy's suit, during play of a No Trump contract. Usually there is no sound reason for failure to play it on the first lead unless you are waiting to kill off an honor of some kind or unless there is apparently a chance to block the suit because the dummy lacks side entries.

USES PUMPING STATION SOON

Empire to Begin Getting Water From Longview Source Within 10 Days.

The Longview pumping station, not used by the city for more than four years, will start pumping water again within the next ten days but not for city residents.

The Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company, who recently obtained council's permission to license the station for $100 a year, will begin using it soon, according to J. M. Hill, president of the company.

Hill announced that the company would reopen the station in a letter to council this week in which he expressed his appreciation for permission to license it.

"This allows us to proceed with our plans of putting into operation the large mill which is now being installed in our sheet producing unit," wrote Hill. The company president said that use of the station would also allow the company to proceed with defense steel orders.

Oliver C. Henkel, secretary-treasurer of the company, also wrote a letter of thanks this week to council. Henkel previously announced that more than $120,000 worth of new machinery had been ordered for the plant.

The company asked the city for use of the station after it learned that it did not have adequate water for expanding industrial purposes.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

The Legend of Broadway.

(No. 8—The Gamblers)

THESE were the lads with the rolling bones and the green-topped tables and the cards that fanned in front of poker faces in smoky little rooms. To them life was the spin of a wheel, the flip of a coin, the beautiful, stretching lines of a three-year-old coming in first.

They dealt in figures that would be fantastic to you riding home from work in the subway and you sitting at a desk all day for $18 a week. These lads dealt in thousands, millions, battalions of figures.

They were known by their loud clothes and their quiet eyes.

Most colorful of all the gamblers who ever hit this town, was tall, soft voiced Nick Dandolos, better known as Nick the Greek. One week in the gay days he lost $1,300,000, and when he came back to town a month later to get even, he dropped half a million more.

One winter night, Nick was waiting at a stage door for a girl who worked in one of the musicals. While he was standing in the icy breeze of the alley, another girl in the chorus—a friend of his girl's—came out, wearing a thin cloth coat. Nick called her over.

"Honey, you'll get pneumonia," he said in his soft, indescribable accent. "Here, take this and go buy yourself a nice warm coat." And he handed her a $1,000 bill.

The girl's eyes flashed angrily.

"You Broadway wise guys with your stage money," she fumed. "You give me a pain. You can't kid me."

And she tore up the bill in front of his eyes.

Nick just smiled and watched her stride away. He didn't even stoop to pick up the pieces.

Among the terrific plungers in those gone-for-ever days was a gentleman from Oklahoma who went by the name of Titanic Thompson. He could outshoot any body around, do acrobatic stunts that looked impossible to ordinary eyes and play golf for high stakes better than any golf pro.

That was because the pro always got nervous when there was $10,000 riding on a hole, but Titanic had no nerves.

His favorite rackets, however, were two that made him chuckle. He used to bet suckers that he could throw a peanut over a high building in a strong wind, and that he could go down into the basement of the old Lindy's and shoot a rat.

The boys around all fell for these gags—until one day somebody located one of Titanic's peanuts on the roof and found it full of lead. And another day another lad discovered that a boy was bribed to sit in the corner of Lindy's basement and turn loose a rat, stuffed with food so that it could hardly walk, whenever he got word that Titanic was descending with a soft touch.

A few years ago, Champ Segal was a high-rolling lad around town, and he owned a fair string of horses. One day he was racing his nags at a big Eastern track when Al Capone and his mob happened to be present.

Champ had entered one of his horses, but just for a "conditioning" race. One of Capone's boys sought him out and asked if the horse had a chance, because Al was contemplating putting a big bet on the nag's nose.

Champ shook his head emphatically. "He's just in there for the fresh air," he explained. "He couldn't beat one horse in the field. Tell Al to forget about him."

Champ, of course, wouldn't lie to Capone. He didn't bet on the horse, either.

Anyway, you know how things happen. The horse came home five lengths in front, at 65 to 1.

Champ disappeared for three months. Three months was the time usually required for Capone to cool down in a case like that.

Butch Tower was another fast lad with a bankroll. Eddie Cantor met him on Broadway one day and advised him to make some quick, legitimate money by buying shares of stock in a famous large department store.

So Tower went out and got himself a large chunk of the securities. But the stock, oddly enough, instead of rising, began a slow but inexorable decline.

Then came an afternoon when Butch, strolling down Broadway, encountered a fellow carrying a small suitcase. "Butch," said the fellow, "do you want to get yourself a real bargain? In here I have got a load of three-dollar ties, and you can have all you want for fifty cents each."

Never one to pass up a good buy, Butch stepped into an alley with the lad and examined his wares. "But where," he remarked, noting the high quality of the cravats, "are you getting this stuff?"

"Oh, we lift it all from the Blank department store," airily explained the salesman. "It's the easiest touch in town. I have got a whole crew working that store and we are slowly cleaning it out."

Butch did three things. First, he flattened the fellow with the cravats. Then he ran to unload his shares. Then he swore off the stock market forever and went back to the dice games, where a guy has a chance to win.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — The movies, will have to look far to find a better self-censorship man than Joseph I. Breen, who resigned after holding the hot spot since 1934, the year the Legion of Decency and other groups clamped down on Hollywood and made it look to its morals.

The censor, wherever he may be, is always the brunt of jokes. It is easy to find the seemingly absurd and ridiculous quirk in his rulings, many of which make him appear as a tedious and literal-minded fussbudget out to spoil whatever galaxy is left to nations and to rob everybody of his good fun.

The Breen organization, which passes on movies before and after production, has had more of its share of kidding, some of it not so good-natured. I think Joe Breen never minded it seriously. I know he went right ahead, doing his job as he saw it, regardless of the popularity or unpopularity of his decisions. He has had some pretty stiff fights, convincing producers and directors that they couldn't "get by" with various censorable scenes, themes or "subtleties," but when Breen got his Irish up he was convincing enough.

In 1934 many feared that self-censorship meant the end of "adult" pictures and the stifling of realism in films. The advent of Breen was followed by an epidemic of costume films and juvenile classics, mostly highly profitable, but in recent months the "adult" movies (if you include the risqué in that category) have been plentiful enough to suggest that the self-censorship was relaxing.

Breen, however, was never prudish in his decisions; his main insistence has been that good taste be observed in dealing with situations of all kinds including the risqué.

"Not for Children" in a curious title for a Jane Withers movie, which means the stage play in adaptation probably will acquire a new name. Jane's most pressing need at the moment, it strikes me, is a best friend to tell her to restrain the mugging that still crops out in her performances. I'll tell her, for that matter, but it's strong direction that must turn the trick.

SEE BREAKDOWN IN SOFT COAL NEGOTIATIONS

Operators Return To Talks In Atmosphere of Gloom - After Caucuses.

BULLETIN
NEW YORK —(AP)—Southern soft coal operators and leaders of the United Mine Workers of America (U. M. W.) adjourned their wage conference today with both sides expressing little hope for an agreement which would avert another work stoppage threatened by U. M. W. President John L. Lewis.

(By United Press)
NEW YORK —Southern soft coal operators returned to their wage-hour deliberations with the United Mine Workers of America today in an atmosphere of gloom that presaged a possible breakdown in negotiations.

The operators spent all day yesterday in private caucuses and it was understood they were prepared to meet union wage demands part way but were unwilling to give up entirely the 40-cent daily wage differential.

Northern operators with whom the union has a contract are paying a basic daily wage of $7 compared to $6.80 being paid by the southerners under a temporary agreement under which mines were reopened May 1.

The union has agreed with northern operators not to sign any contract with the south which does not eliminate the differential John L. Lewis, U. M. W. president, said earlier in the week that the issue was clear and that miners might leave their jobs throughout the eight-state Appalachian area unless the southerners came to terms by the end of the week.

In caucuses, the southern operators were understood to have agreed to split the differential. The union, on the other hand, was believed adamant in its demand that wage conditions be equalized throughout the area.

Nearly 400,000 miners in the Appalachian area—150,000 in the south and 250,000 in the north—would be affected by a breakdown in the negotiations here if the union decided to close the industry en bloc.

Youth Hurt When Hit By Car Improves, Hospital Says.

Dennis E. Berry, 16, of 54 Raleigh avenue, who sustained back and head injuries when he was struck by an automobile yesterday on Park avenue west near Brinkerhoff avenue, was reported in "fairly good" condition today by hospital officials.

Berry sustained severe cuts about the head and flesh was gouged from his back. It was thought that his back was broken although x-rays taken at the hospital disclosed later that such was not the case.

J. W. Fisher, 120 Columbia avenue, driver of the car which struck Berry, was released by police late yesterday afternoon. He was held until the police had learned the extent of the boy's injuries.

Off With Those Felt Hats, Put on A Straw Tomorrow

Saturday is Straw Hat day in Mansfield. Time for the male population to trade the drab felts of winter for a fancy straw in a gay color.

Haberdashers are prepared for the event with every kind of style for every kind of taste. In fact they held their opening display today to give the public a sample of what the styles would be like.

The sailor standard will still be good but it will be styles like the telescope, pork pie and a snappy number known as "Planter's Punch," that will dominate the scene, according to predictions of local merchants.

Cocoanut straws, a rich brown in color, lead the field from the color angle with greens, greys and tans giving close competition. Bands are gayer than ever, many of them printed.

From all indications Straw Hat day will be a pretty colorful affair in Mansfield as current weather reports point to the collaboration of the weather man in the event.

NAVY CROSS AWARD LIKELY IN DARING RESCUE OF 'CHUTIST

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—(AP)—Two naval aviators who snatched a marine parachutist from death in mid-air may receive the Navy Cross for what superior officers described as the most remarkable rescue in aviation history.

The fliers, Lieut. W. W. Lowrey, 34, of Dallas, Tex., and Aviation Machinist's Mate J. R. McCants, 41, of Jordan, Mont., looked light ly on their spectacular feat. "Any experienced navy pilot could have done it," Lowrey said.

But others differed, particularly Marine Lieut. Walter S. Osipoff, 23, Akron. He knew that were it not for Lowrey's skill and daring and for McCants' bravery and strength, his life would have been forfeit when he leaped with his parachute from a marine transport plane over a navy landing field yesterday.

The automatic 'chute release somehow failed to function. The static line snarled and left Osipoff dangling head down.

Passengers still aboard found they couldn't haul him back.

Lowrey and McCants, test pilots, noticed Osipoff's predicament. They hurried into a navy biplane dive-bomber and took off in pursuit of the transport.

Far out over the ocean they flew, for the air over land was too rough for the precise flying their rescue plan entailed.

Slowly the smaller plane nudged up under the larger. Within 20 feet of the transport's tail assembly, Pilot Lowrey held his ship, while McCants reached over the side and hauled Osipoff in.

Then Lowrey pointed the nose of his plane directly at the lines attaching Osipoff to the transport and with a slice of the propeller snipped them through.

FACES ACTION ON 3 'MUST' BILLS TODAY

Many Members Already Gone Home; Budget, and Mines Measures on List.

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Ohio—The Ohio legislature limped to work today for the final operating day of the 94th biennial session, its ranks depleted by numerous members who had gone home.

Three pieces of "must" legislation were on the last work sheet. The senate-approved bill to raise safety standards in coal mines, up for a vote in the house.

An appropriation of $350,000 to pay sundry claims against the state, before the senate for action, and

A compromise report of senate-house conferees on the $352,800,000 biennial appropriation bill, which required approval of both branches.

With these matters disposed of, the legislature will recess for 10 days or more to permit the governor to sign bills and then will adjourn sine die.

The appropriation bill conference report, submitted to the senate last night, eliminates an increase of $450,000 in state university building funds and adds $410,000 to hire 100 extra men for the state highway patrol. It also allocates $101,000 for enforcement of the mine safety bill and hiring of additional mine inspectors.

Chairman Fred Adams of the senate finance committee said the bill would leave a surplus of $180,000 in the general revenue fund.

Yesterday's session saw enactment of legislation assuring indefinite tenure of employment for experienced school teachers with life certificates in districts of 800 pupils or more.

The act, sought by teachers for many years, sets a five-year limit on contract in districts of less than 800 pupils.

Other highlights on the eve of adjournment were:

Final passage of a bill increasing the maximum workmen's compensation death award from $6,500 to $7,000 and raising the maximum weekly benefit from $18.75 to $21.

Arrangements for creation of soil conservation districts upon approval of 65 per cent of the landowners.

An unsuccessful attempt by the senate Democratic minority to force a vote on a bill guaranteeing $40 a month old age pensions, and senate receipt of a protest from Democratic Leader William M. Boyd of Cleveland, describing as a "lasting shame" the senate's procedure in enactment of legislation barring un-American parties from the ballot.

The house killed a bill of Senator Grant P. Ward (R-Franklin) which would have created a legislative committee to investigate horse racing laws of Ohio and other states and recommend remedial legislation.

The senate also gave final approval to bills authorizing the Scioto county commissioners to reimburse a former county treasurer for $3,500, which he paid to cover script lost in a flood.

It's Joy Instead Of Tears -- 600 Escape From Mine

BELLAIRE, O.—(AP)—It was joy today instead of tears for the families of 600 Bell and River Coal company miners.

At 3 p. m. yesterday, just before the men went off duty, a mine motor jumped the track deep in the mine, knocked out roof supports and caused a rock fall. The 600 were trapped.

James Roscoe, sr., 48, of Bellaire, engineer of the train, was buried alive under tons of rock. His son, James, jr., 28, was riding the rear end of the train when the accident occurred. He ran for help.

Terrified families hurried to the scene and watched rescue squads don equipment and enter the mine. But from there on the news was good.

Rescuers, digging furiously, found Roscoe alive and uninjured. Protected by an empty car and his safety helmet. Three hours later they broke through and the miners began emerging from behind the barricade.

By 6 p. m. all were safe.

PAYMENTS DUE

Garbage Service Accounts Being Collected at City Hall.

Collections for city garbage service bills for June, July and August were started yesterday by Fred Lingafelter, secretary, and will continue through next week.

Lingafelter said that approximately 4,300 bills which are expected to bring in $8,500 had been mailed out. He requested customers to bring their bills with them at time of payment.

Louise Briggs, pupil in Madison high school, won double honors for the essay she wrote this spring for the American Legion patriotic essay contest. The paper, entitled "Lincoln and the Constitution," first won her a free trip to Washington, D. C. Reading the paper, Congressman J. Harry McGregor, representing Richland county and the 17th district, thought it was good that he read it the other day in the house of representatives.

Red Skelton's Mansfield brothers, Denny and Paul, keep an eye on the local movie programs so as not to miss seeing their brother on the screen. This week they had a good laugh at the comedian in "The People vs. Dr. Kildare," showing at the Ohio. Red has been in pictures since 1937, when he first appeared with Ginger Rogers in "Having Wonderful Time." According to his brother, he is working in the cast of Eleanor Powell's new feature, "Lady Be Good."

Recently graded and seeded in grass, the field is being damaged by adults and youngsters alike who continue to tramp across the new grass. There is no fence around the field which formerly was a dumping ground.

"If they'll only let the grass alone until next fall, we will have an ideal playground and football field," Dotson said.

Everywhere I went yesterday fans were talking about the great showing made by the Braves in Mansfield's Ohio State league lifter of Wednesday night against the Lima Pandas.

They liked the pepper and the spirit and the workmanlike manner in which Manager Alex Clowson's boys poured the power to the Pandas.

Clowson could have told them something about that spirit, even as he told me.

"I'm glad we're starting to play ball for keeps," Alex declared. "I just can't hold these kids in for more practice."

"When we practice at night I tell them to report at 7 o'clock, and everyone of them is at the ball yard at 8."

"And they're slipping out there for hitting practice in the afternoon."

"What are you going to do with a bunch of hustling boys like that? They're good boys, and Mansfield is going to like them before this season is far along."

There was another thing the fans were bringing up as I wandered round the town.

"What," they asked, "is this Hess guy to you? The one who ran out of gas and stayed all night at that farmhouse in Scotland. And where was the farmer's daughter?"

"That," I told 'em, "not too seriously, 'must be my Uncle Rudy. That's my drinking uncle."

Higher than a kite the other night was Rudy until he had to bail out. And there was that farmer with a pitchfork, instead of a shotgun, waiting for him.

And now Rudy's leader, the guy who got him into the mess, won't bail out the bauler. This is a baleful tale.

All is not right in the Reich, I fear, when Rudy says: "I wouldn't stay here for all the beer in Pilsen. It's Scotch for me from now on." And Miller says the guy is nuts!

MAKES WANTS MORE GAMES AT NIGHT

PHILADELPHIA—(AP)—Connie Mack, noting a drop in baseball attendance due to stepped up defense work, disclosed today a move for more night games to meet demands of fans.

He predicted the major leagues would get together in joint session within two weeks and lift a rule prohibiting more than seven non-journal tilts at home a season.

"We may have 10, 11 or even more," declared the manager of the Athletics. "My suggestion to increase night games—voted down at the winter meeting—has been gaining momentum."

"Within the last few days I have talked to practically all the owners in our own league and I am sure a similar discussion has been going on in the National."

A Milnar Gets 5th Victory

Needs Help To Turn Back Late Sox Rally.

BOSTON—(AP)—Bob Feller is rightfully viewed as the Indians' premier pitcher, but American League followers should never make the mistake of overlooking Al Milnar, the lantern-jawed southpaw who grew up on the Cleveland sandlots.

Last year Big Al notched 8 triumphs, the top figure for porters in the league. Yesterday the 27-year-old flinger beat Boston, 6 to 4, for his fifth decision of the season, putting him on the heels of six-victory Feller.

The triumph, the third in a row for the fast-stepping Redskins, placed them four games in front of second-place Chicago. Jim Bagby and Boston's Mickey Harris were the pitching nominees for the second game of the Red Sox series.

Milnar limited the Hub City batters to four hits until he weakened in the eighth. Joe Heving and Feller finished, with the latter pitching to only two men.

Ken Keltner's double and two singles sparked a 11-hit attack against Earl Johnson, Bill Fleming and Mike Ryba. Johnson, the losing pitcher, was shelved out in the seventh by Cleveland's two-run rally.

The Indians opened scoring with a run in the third on Lou Boudreau's double and Jeff Heath's single. They added three in the fifth when Clarence Campbell and Keltner singled, Hal Trosky walked and Joe Cronin made a two-run error on Gerry Walker's grounder. Stan Spensky then allowed Ray Mack's fly to drop for a double and Walker scampered home.

Keltner's two-base smash, singles by Trosky and Heath and Walker's fly plated the deciding tally in the seventh.

Two walks and Bobby Doerr's single gave Boston a run in the fourth and Dom DiMaggio's walk and Spence's triple added another in the fifth. Doerr's double scored two runs in the eighth and chased Milnar.

Feller is slated to pitch the final game of the series tomorrow. Sunday the Indians invade Philadelphia for a two-day stand.

The Chicago White Sox are performing tricks again in the American League, hovering around second place with a collection of cast-offs while other star-studded clubs wallow in despair.

Their aging pitchers have surpassed the staffs of every other team in both majors by hurling 17 complete games out of 24 played, in spite of hit-and-miss nip from their teammates.

The Sox have played errorless ball in only three of their 14 victories, and their ineffectual hitting has caused nine of their 14 victories to come through a one-run swing.

Yesterday was an occasion—the retirement of their brash swash-buckling leader, Jimmy Dykes, as a player after 22 years on the active list of the American League.

And the Sox celebrated. They whipped out a 14-hit offensive and sent the once-proud Yankees crashing to their fifth straight defeat, 13-1. The Sox had made only five homers all season, but they belted three more as evidence of their enthusiasm.

The Detroit Tigers broke their six-game losing streak by overwhelming the Athletics 10-2, with a vicious 18-hit attack and the seven-hit hurling of young Hal Newhouse.

The St. Louis Browns shut out the Washington Senators, 7-0, with a sensational one-hit pitching performance by slender Dennis Galehouse, one of the pitchers the Browns bought from the Red Sox last winter.

Cincinnati's World champions went staggering to their fifth consecutive defeat, 5-1, at the hands of the Phillies.

The Boston Braves bumped off the St. Louis Cardinals, 6-3, in a loose game played in 90-degree temperature.

Hal Schumacher outpitched Claude Passeau, six hits to eight, and led the New York Giants to a 2-1 decision over the Chicago Cubs.

Leads Eagles

CHUCK SWAIN

ASHLAND—Leading the hitting attack of the Ashland college baseball team is Captain Chuck Swain, Lucas, O., boy. Swain is pacing the club with a .410 average for seven games. He has collected 10 hits out of 24 trips to the plate. Swain is a crack second baseman and is playing his final season of the team.

American Day Observed Here

Patriotic Ceremonies To Precede Ball Game.

McVey Post, American Legion, and the Mansfield Braves of the Ohio State league will participate in the nation-wide observance of "I am an American" day next Sunday at the Fairgrounds.

Legionnaires throughout the country will conduct patriotic ceremonies in major and minor league baseball parks Sunday.

The McVey post drum and bugle corps will participate in the pre-game ceremonies that will get under way at 2:30, followed a half hour later by an Ohio State league game between the Braves and Fostoria Red Birds.

Dewey Durant, who is chairman of the Legion committee arranging the ceremonies at the ball park, said that all Legionnaires in uniform will be admitted free.

Other members of the committee are F. E. Buzard, Ben Emmer, John Stentz and Fred Gardner.

It was also announced that all persons entering the Fairground Sunday will be presented with miniature American flags. The ceremonies will also include the presentation of a flag by the McVey post to the Braves for their flag pole in centerfield.

Jenkins Meets Bob Montgomery

NEW YORK—(AP)—Laughlin Jenkins goes to the post against serious Bob Montgomery in Madison Square Garden tonight to try to prove once again that the best way to get ready for an opponent is to play the jute box circuit on a motorcycle.

And young Bob, a Philadelphia Negro who works harder for a fight than a bridegroom trying to avoid attention, is just as sure he can show that Lew's way doesn't pay.

This 10-round tussle, which has no bearing on Jenkins lightweight championship ship, should decide whether the right way to get ready to bash another guy's back is (A) the Jenkins system—or burn the candle at both ends—or (B) the Montgomery manner of putting your mind to it and really working.

The two tournaments will be run simultaneously, and scores fired by Ohio conference entrants will count in both tournaments. Marshall Carlson is defending champ in both events.

The state high school tournament will be played at the university course May 23 and 24. Last year Don Shock of Dayton, brother of Miss Janet Shock, state women's champion, won the individual laurels, while Toledo Devilbiss annexed the team championship.

Ashland Seeking 6th Win

Richcreek's Hurling Sparks Eagle Play.

ASHLAND—When the Ashland college Eagles meet the Bowling Green Falcons here Saturday afternoon in a May day baseball game, they will be seeking their sixth win of the season. To date the Eagles have won five and lost two. One of the victories includes an early season win over the Falcons.

The veteran Eagles have been getting some good pitching from Jim Richcreek and they also have been doing plenty of hard clubbing at the plate.

Many of their hits have been for extra bases and five members of the team are hitting better than .300. Capt. Chuck Swain is leading the club with an average of .410 in seven games. Other leading hitters are Virge Scooby .387, Bud Plank .345, and Jim Richcreek .330. Bill Frisby has hit .312 for five games.

Coach George Donges' club opened the season against Wooster and came home with a 5-2 win. They then turned back Bowling Green 11-9 and Kenyon 5-2. Their next foe was the touring Wilson Junior college nine of Chicago. The Wilson team, which has won the Illinois junior college title for the past several years, upset the Eagles, 6-4, for the team's first loss of the year. Ashland then won from Kenyon 5-2 and Heidelberg 18-8 before being defeated by Otterbein, 7-6. The Eagles were ahead in this one by five runs but an uprising featured by two freak home runs brought on defeat.

Coach Donges will send Richcreek to the mound Saturday. Jim will be trying for his fourth win of the season. Matt Resick will be behind the plate with Flax at first, Swain at second, Flax at third, Jim Ross at third, playing short, Jim Ross at third, playing short, Jim Ross at third, playing short.

Jimmy Quits As Player

Garrulous Dykes Goes Silent For Once.

By HARRY FERGUSON
NEW YORK—(AP)—He walked out to home plate at Yankee stadium, took off his cap and the sun glistened on his bald spot.

Ball players were lined up on both sides of him. Somebody made a little speech and handed James Joseph Dykes a scroll of parchment. Ordinarily a garrulous, wise-cracking gent, Mr. Dykes was so overwhelmed that for the first time in his life he confined a speech to one word—"Thanks."

The little ceremony yesterday marked the end of Dykes' career as an active player. From now on he will devote himself to managing the Chicago White Sox, a job that he has been handling with considerable distinction since 1934.

Immediately after Dykes tucked the scroll under his arm his boys went out, committed assault and battery on the New York Yankees and moved into second place. For a guy who takes the scraps from the rich man's table in the American league, James Joseph Dykes is doing all right.

Dykes is 44, which is plenty old for an active player. His major league career began in 1919 when he got into 17 games as a second baseman for Connie Mack's Athletics. Although his entire major league career has been divided between the Athletics and the White Sox, he has played every position in the infield and did a better than fair job at all of them.

He played for the Athletics through their lean years and fat, and got into three world series when Connie Mack's powerhouse won pennants in 1929-30-31.

Dykes puts away his bat and gloves with only one regret. He would like to bat once more against Lefty Gomez, the Yankee pitcher. They have traded many a wisecrack in their day and Dykes will insist until he is a graybeard that he can hit Gomez every time he goes to bat. But, considering where the White Sox are today, Dykes is willing to pass up that pleasure if the boys will only stay up there.

At the rate American Association teams are going, at least six of them can look forward to something of a blanket finish in the title race.

Minneapolis, which has been trying to establish a foothold in first place for a week, was pushed out again last night and Kansas City took over by a percentage margin.

Other results conspired to leave the sixth place team only two games out of the lead.

Minneapolis put on a belated attack last night, but St. Paul, however, did the Millers one better, scored twice in their half of the ninth and won, 4 to 3.

THEATERS

Star-Studded Spectacle.

Hailed as a greater spectacle than its earlier "Ziegfeld" predecessor, "Ziegfeld Girl" opens at the Ohio Saturday with a star-spangled cast topped by such names as Hedy Lamarr, Judy Garland, Lana Turner, James Stewart, Jackie Cooper and Tony Martin. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard who made "The Great Ziegfeld," the production is costumed by Adrian in a manner that surpasses the lavishness of the first film. Telling the story of three girls who jumped from obscurity to stardom via the Ziegfeld route, the picture emphasizes the glitter and beauty for which Florenz Ziegfeld was famous.

Comedy in Cheyenne.

"The Lady From Cheyenne," a comedy of frontier Wyoming set to a modern tempo, gives Loretta Young her first starring role in a western. Opening Saturday at the Madison, the picture presents Miss Young as a naive but determined easterner who goes west to make her fortune. There she runs afoul of crooked politicians led by Edward G. Arnold and Robert Preston. Gladys George, Frank Craven and Jessie Ralph are in the cast. "Her First Beau," with Jane Withers and Jackie Cooper is the co-attraction.

"Oomph" Sheridan.

George Brent and Ann "Oomph" Sheridan are teamed in "Honey-Moon For Three," sophisticated comedy opening today at the Ritz. As a famous author and his secretary, Brent and Miss Sheridan decide upon marriage for convenience and then see their plans go overboard when a former sweetheart of Brent, played by Osa Massen, turns up. Charles Ruggles adds to the fun as does Walter Catlett. "Cowboy From Sundown" is the second picture.

Spy Plot.

Spy plot in a freak show furnishes excitement in "Meet Boston Blackie," at the Park. Chester Morris and Rochelle Hudson are co-starring. Tim Holt in "Along the Rio Grande" has Ray Whitley, Betty Jane Rhodes and Emmett Lynn.

Jewel Theft.

Fiction's suave scoundrel returns to the majestic today in "The Lone Wolf Meets a Lady," co-starring Warren Williams and Jean Muir. A $100,000 diamond necklace is the prize as the Lone Wolf solves a double murder, frustrates a gang of thieves and rescues a damsel in distress. Eric Blore, Victor Jory, Warren Hull and Roger Pryor head the supporting cast. Ranchers and cattle rustlers battle it out in "Outlaws of the Panhandle," with Charles Starrett, the second time.

MR NEBB MY NAME IS GENTRY. I REPRESENT A MANUFACTURING CONCERN THAT IS LOOKING FOR A SMALL TOWN LOCATION. WE'LL BRING 500 FAMILIES HERE BUT WE EXPECT THE TOWN TO HELP US FINANCIALLY.

THIS IS A BIG WORLD. JUST WHY DO YOU PICK NORTHVILLE? I DON'T THINK YOU COULD FIND A TOWN LESS RECEPTIVE TO YOUR PROPOSITION IN THE COUNTRY.

I OWN THE HOTEL AND THE POWER PILL FACTORY AND THAT'S ALL THE REAL ESTATE I OWN. DON'T YOU THINK IF I HAD FAITH IN THE FUTURE OF THIS BURG I WOULDN'T OWN HALF THE REAL ESTATE?

YOU CERTAINLY ARE NOT MUCH OF A BOOSTER FOR YOUR TOWN.

GLOSE MUST HAVE PASSED THE WORD ON TO THIS BABY. I'M DUCK SOUP FOR GUYS LIKE THAT BUT YOU'VE GOT TO GIVE ME MORE THAN A FEW DAYS TO FORGET.

BRICK BRADFORD—On the Throne of Titanis.

AH, HOME— YOU CAN'T BEAT IT— A CIGAR, A NEWSPAPER OR A GOOD BOOK— I'M GETTING TO THE AGE WHERE THIS HOME STUFF IS GREAT.

WHAT ARE YOU DOING? READING ABOUT THAT DIVORCE CASE? WELL, IT'S THE SAME OLD STORY— LEAVE IT TO THOSE MEN— WHEN THEY GET RICH, THE WOMEN WHO SCRIMPED AND SAVED TO RAISE THE FAMILY, AREN'T GOOD ENOUGH FOR THEM ANY MORE—

IF WE WERE BOTH YOUNG AND SINGLE AGAIN, WOULD YOU WANT ME TO BE YOUR WIFE?

NOW LOOK HERE, DARLING! WHAT'S THE USE OF TRYING TO START AN ARGUMENT JUST AS WE'VE SETTLED DOWN TO ENJOY A QUIET EVENING?

DICK TRACY—Callers.

GREENCASTLE, Ind., (AP) — "Like father, like son" in occupations doesn't mean anything— if a survey among Depauw university students means anything. The survey showed that few students planned to make their living as did their fathers and mothers. Of 80 sons of ministers, only 31 intended to become ministers themselves. Of more than 800 men, only two wanted to be farmers. And of more than 720 women, only 21 said they expected to become housewives.

She had slipped and fallen

She is survived by her parents:

and one brother, Walter, jr.,

Mamie Thompson and Mrs. Anna Harris of Ashland. Funeral services will be held at the Nazarene church, Saturday afternoon, Rev. C. E. Ryder will officiate. Burial will be in Ashland cemetery.
